ALPHABETS OF FOREIGN LANGUAGES

The figures in the table below indicate the values of the letters when used as numerical symbols, either now, or, in the case of some of the Roman letters, in the Middle Ages. The Arabic alphabet is used, with few modifications, by the Arabs themselves; by European Turks; by the Moslems of North Airica; by Syrians, Persians and Afgans; by the Mohammedans of India and by the Tartars.

ALPHABETS FOR THE BLIND AND THE DEAF AND DUMB

THE BRAILLE ALPHABET.

Braille is a system of Embossed Writing formed by using all the possible combinations of six dots, arranged thus: 1 • • 2 The combinations are chosen systemati- 3 • • 4 cally as shown by the arrangement 5 • • 6 below; thus punctuation signs, for instance, are always in the lower part of the cell. The numerals are represented by the first ten letters in the order shown, when preceded by the numerical sign.

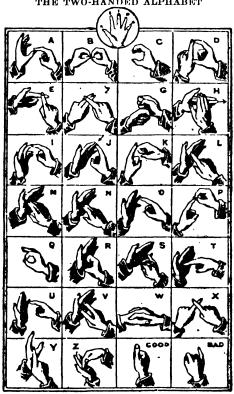

Braille is written in three Grades: Grade 1, uncontracted; Grade 2, with the addition of contractions (as shown below) and Grade 3, more fully contracted. Further arrangements of dots, not used as letter signs, represent additional words and wordelements and letters with diacritical marks.

THE MANUAL ALPHABET

The deaf and dumb communicate by a so-called manual alphabet, i.e. by means of signs made by the hands. Two such alphabets are in use, requiring one and two hands respectively, the latter being the one in common use in Great Britain, the former on the Continent and in America. The two-handed form is shown below.

THE TWO-HANDED ALPHABET

HOW TO CORRECT PRINTERS' PROOFS-Contd.

mark in the text as \checkmark and write in the margin. If the transposition is complicated, number the words in their proper order and write to in the margin.

- 1 depress a space or lead which has worked up too high and prints.
- x replace broken or worn type.
- wf wrong fount : set in type like the rest.
- 9 invert the type (when a letter is printed upside down).
- straighten a line or lines.
- I line up, especially the ends of lines, A two-point lead (1-36th inch) is lines. meant unless otherwise stated.

- Query to the author.
 - To underline a word: underline in text and write "underline" in margin.
 - To centre a word or words: make an appropriate mark in the text (e.g. and write "centre" in margin.
 - To lift or lower type matter: or generally to change its position: ring round the matter and connect it with an arrow to the point or line desired.

Note.-Lines or arrows drawn from proof marks in the text to the margin are normally signs of bad proof-reading and "dirty" proofs, but in confused or crowded proofs they are sometimes unavoidable.

HOW TO CORRECT PRINTERS' PROOFS

The marks and signs given below are the symbols generally accepted for convenience and speed in correcting printers' proofs. The author who wishes to save time and expense will verify in his manuscript all doubtful spellings by one standard dictionary, use a uniform system of punctuation and composition, and in the correction of proofs cause as little dislocation as possible. Corrections in "final proofs"—when the text has been made up into page form—are particularly costly. The duty of the printers' reader is, besides the correction of actual mistakes, to ensure uniformity of spelling, word division, punctuation and typography according to the style determined by the practice of his office. The following shows a sample text with corrections indicated and corrections made

THE WHITE RABBIT.

It was the White Rabbit, trotting slowly back again, and looking anxiously about it as it went, as if it had lost something: and she heard it muttering to itself, "The Duchess! The Duchess! Oh, my dear paws! Oh, my fur and whiskers! She'll get me executed, as sure as ferrets are ferrets! Where can I have dropped them, I wonder?" Alice guessed in a moment that it was looking for the fan and the pair of white kid gloves,* and she very good-naturedly began hunting about for them, but they were nowhere to be seen-everything seemed to have changed since her swim in the pool, and the great hall, with the glass table and the little door, had vanished completely. . .

-Alice in Wonderland, by LEWIS CARROLL.

For every mark in the text a corresponding mark must be made in the margin. Corrections should be made directly opposite the line in which they occur. Where there are several marks in the same line, corrections should be arranged in the margin in exactly the order in which the errors occur in the text and should be separated from one another by vertical lines. The signs given here can, of course, be used for similar instructions in the preparation of the manuscript itself.

The most commonly used marks in the text are: AA (caret), indicating that an insertion is desired as defined in the margin.

Crossing out-which should be used only if deletion or substitution are required.

Underlines—used where attention is to be drawn to corrections required without obscuring the letters or words. In addition various forms of underlining are used to indicate specific classes of type with the corresponding signs in the margingiven below, thus:

use italics.

use small capitals.

= use capitals.

~~ use boldface type.

.....to cancel a mistaken alteration.

The accepted forms for the corrections are:

of (L. dele) delete, take out. Written in several forms, as ∮, ∮, etc. Cross out the matter to be deleted and write ♂ in the margin. Stet ("let it stand"), used to cancel a mistaken alteration. A dotted line is placed under the correction to be cancelled and the word stet written in the margin.

tom use roman type. Thus, to change italic into roman, underline the italic and write nom. in the margin.

ital use italic type.

of use bold-faced type.

cop, cops use a capital letter or letters. sm cops use small capitals.

4. (lower case) use a small letter (i.e. not a capital; the capital letters are kept in the upper case on a compositor's bench.)

insert or substitute full stop: colon.

,/; insert or substitute comma; semicolon.

insert leaders.

insert inverted commas.

六/孟/溱 insert parenthesis dash or interruption dash.

/-/ insert hyphen.

□ □ □ to indent a line. Place ∧ text. (Each square denotes one em-roughly the space taken by the "m" of the fount).

insert space between letters or words. reduce space between words: put & tween words and *# in margin.

close up (as letters).

take out, closing up space that is left.

Ah. To make a new paragraph : put [at beginning of desired paragraph, and AA. in margin.

on To run two paragraphs into one: mark with a connecting line in text, and write see in margin.

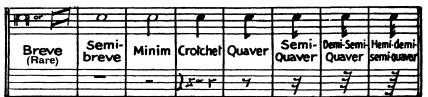

Des To transpose words or letters out of order: [Continued Opposite

MUSIC

Music is written on the Staff (or Stave) which consists of five parallel lines making four spaces, each line and each space marking an alteration in pitch of one tone. Ledger Lines (short similar lines parallel to the staff) are used to extend the compass of the staff above (higher pitch), or below (lower pitch). Bars, or vertical lines cutting the staff, are used to separate the notes into measures of equal length. The Double Bar (one, or two, strong lines or one fine line and one strong line) marks the larger divisions of a piece or movement (as a verse in hymn tunes, etc.), or its end. When the notes in two or more staffs are to be played at the same time, the staffs are connected at the left ends by a straight line and a brace.

The Notes.—The signs denoting the time value or duration of the notes and rests (or silences) used in music are given below. From left to right, each note represents twice the duration of sound of that which comes next in order. The stem of the note can be turned up or down according to convenience.

RESTS

A dot placed after a note or rest increases its value one-half:

Two dots increases it a half and a quarter:

Long pauses may be denoted thus:

The figure denotes the length of the pause in bars.

A Sharp or a Flat respectively raises or lowers the pitch of a note one semitone. Double sharps and double flats indicate two semitones. A Natural cancels one sharp or flat. Two naturals cancel a double sharp or double flat. They are denoted thus;

🙎 Sharp 🕱 or 💥 Double Sharp.

b Flat bb Double Flat.

natural. Trom Double Sharp to Sharp.

p From Double Flat to Flat.

The Clefs, which are placed at the beginning of a staff, determine the absolute pitch of certain notes, and therefore, together with the position on the staff, of all the notes. They are marked as follows:

Time (the Measure of a composition) is indicated at the beginning of the composition by figures or signs, as follows:

Simple measures:

2 or ; 2; 2 Duple, 2 beats to the bar.

; 3; 3 Triple, 3 beats to the bar.

4/2; 4/4; or (Common); 4/8 Quadruple, 4 beats to the bar.

 $\frac{5}{2}$; $\frac{5}{4}$; $\frac{5}{8}$ Five beat (uncommon).

 $\frac{7}{2}$; $\frac{7}{4}$; $\frac{7}{8}$ Seven beat (uncommon).

Compound measures (when the beat equals a dotted note and is therefore divisible into three equal parts):

6; 6; 6 Compound Duple.

9; 9; 9 Compound Triple.

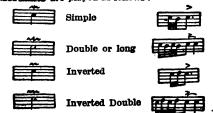

12; 12; 12 Compound Quadruple.

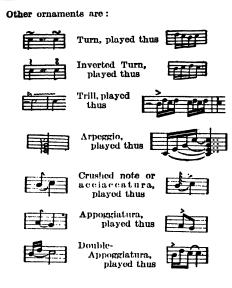

Occasional variations in time are:

Mordants are played as follows:

Instructions for the Execution of the piece are given by the following signs:

Crescendo, gradual increase of Swell, crescendo then diminuendo.

Bind or Tie, connecting two or more notes in the same position on the staff, indicates that they should be played as one.

Slur.

- Over several notes which must be played Over smoothly.
- 2. To indicate the phrasing desired.
- 3. To indicate groups of notes, as triplets.
- 4. In vocal music, when two or more notes are sung to one syllable.

Pause, placed over a note or rest, shows that it should be held longer than its natural value.

Sforzando, with sudden emphasis.

Staccato, short, disconnected notes.

In vocal music, signs used to show where breath should be taken.

The Repetition Signs are:

ß

_

Repeat the passage within the signs.

Repeat the preceding measure.

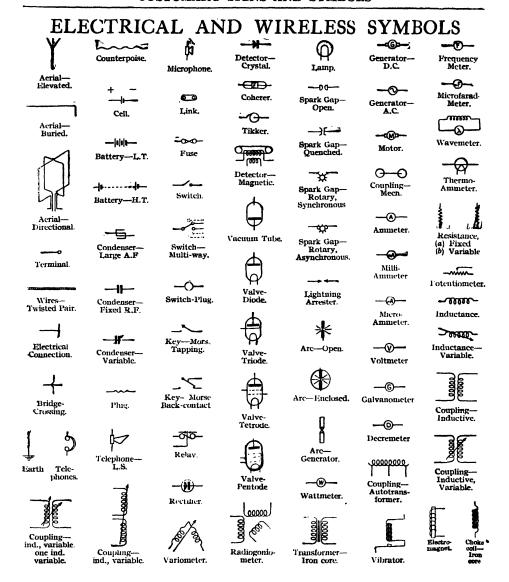

Repeat from this point (placed above the staff), usually referred to at the end of the passage to be repeated by D.S. or Dal Seano (from the sign).

MOTORING SIGNS AND SIGNALS

These signs used upon the highways of India are erected on black and white striped posts, 9 feet high in the country, and 8 feet high in towns. With the exception of the parking sign, they are all surmounted by the orange triangle shown in the first row of drawings, and set up on the left side of the road facing the driver. The circular signs have legal force and are carried out in black and white on an orange background. The rectangular signs (with the exception of the parking sign) are in black and white with a narrow orange border and serve merely to give information to the public.

The following are the officially recommended Hand Signals for use by drivers of motor vehicles:

1. I am going to turn to my right.

2. I am going to slow down or turn to my left.

3. I am going to stop.

4. You may overtake me on my right.

BRITISH INDIAN MONEY, WEIGHTS AND MEASURES

The Gold Coin is in Mohur = 16 rupees, but Silver is the standard metal of India. The current coins of Silver: 1-rupee piece, 8-anna piece, 4-anna piece, and 2-anna piece; Nickel Silver: 1-anna piece, 2-anna piece, and 4-anna piece; and Copper: 1-pice piece, ½-pice piece and 1-pie piece.

The weight of the Gold Mohur and that of the current rupee is the same, viz., 180 grains Troy, Sicca Rupees are referred to in the Money Market, but they are not issued; 100 Sicca Rupees are equal to 106-10-8 current rupees.

To convert Sicca Rupees into current, add 1/15; and current rupees into Sicca, deduct 1/15.

Bazar Weight.—16 chittacks are one seer, or 2 lb. 0 oz. 13 drs.; and 40 seers are 1 maund or 82 lb. 2 ozs. 3 drs.; 100 Bazar maunds = 110 Factory; and 1½ Factory maund 1 owt.

Factory Weight.—16 chittacks are 1 seer, or 1 lb. 13 ozs. 14 drs.; and 40 seers are 1 maund or 74 lb. 10 ozs. 11 drs. The Indian maund = 82 2/7 lb. Avoirdupois Weight.

BRITISH INDIAN WEIGHTS

The Unit of the British Ponderary System is called the Tola. It weighs 180 grains English Troy Weight. From it upwards are derived the heavy weights, viz., Chittack, Seer and Maund; and by its sub-division the small or jewellers' weight called Mashas, Ruttees and Dhans.

- 1 Dhán or grain is equal to 15|32 grain Troy, or 3|175 dr. Avoir.
- 4 Dháns make 1 Ruttee, or 17 grain Troy, or 17 | 175 dr. Avoir.
- 8 Ruttees make 1 Masha, or 15 grains Troy, or 96|175 dr. Avoir.
 12 Mashas make 1 Tola, or 7 dwt. 12 grains Troy,
- or 6 102 175 dr. Avoir.

 5 Tolas make 1 Chittack, or 1 oz. 17 i dwt. Troy,
- or 2 2 35 oz. Avoir. 16 Chittacks make 1 Seer, or 21 lbs. Troy, or
- 16 Chittacks make 1 Seer, or 21 lbs. Troy, or 2 2 35 lbs. Avoir.
- $40~{\rm Seers}$ make 1 Maund, or 100 lbs. Troy, or 82 2|7 lbs. Avoir.

TO CONVERT INDIAN WEIGHT INTO AVOIRDUPOIS

Multiply the weight in seers by 72, and divide by 35; the result will be the weight in lbs. Avoirdupois; or multiply the weight in maunds by 36, and divide by 49; the result will be the weight in owts. Avoirdupois.

TO CONVERT AVOIRDUPOIS WEIGHT INTO INDIAN WEIGHT

Multiply the weight in lbs. Avoirdupois by 35, and divide by 72; or multiply the weight in cwts. by 49, and divide by 36; the result will be the weight; in the former, in seers; in the latter, in maunds.

A Ton is equal to 27.222 Maunds, or 271 Maunds nearly.

3 Unglis make 1 Girah	• •		say, 21 inches
8 Girahs make 1 Hath	• •	• •	say, 18 inches
2 Haths make 1 Guz		• •
N.B.—The Guz varies	in diffe	erent.	localities from 24 to 36 inches.

There appears to be no Indian measures of capacity for Dry and Liquid goods, which are sold by weight.

Wherever, for the sake of convenience measures are employed, they are intended to represent some specific weight of Seer, Chittack, etc.

LINEAL MEASURE

Notwithstanding that the cubit or human forearm is basis or unit in Oriental and Western countries, there is no fixed standard established in India.

In Bengal the measure mostly used is the following:—

1 Hath (Cubit)—18 Inches; 4 Haths—1 Danda, or 2 Yards; 2,000 Dandas—1 Coss.

The Coss or Bengal mile is equal to 1 mile, 1 furlong, 3 poles, 31 yards English.

The Indian Imperial Coss is equal to 21 miles, nearly.

In the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh the average distance is about 2 miles, but it differs in almost every province in the country. For instance, in Agra and Muttra the coss is about 1½ mile; towards the hills the coss is a little more than a mile; in Bundelshund it is three times as long as in other parts and is called a Pucca coss; while in the Doab it is the Cow coss, or as far as the lowing of a cow is heard at dead of night.

BENGAL SQUARE OR LAND MEASURE

20 Uswansees = 1 Suswansee; 20 Suswansees = 1 Kuchwansee; 20 Kuchwansees = 1 Biswansee; 20 Biswansees = 1 Biswa; 20 Biswas = 1 Beegah.

There is, however, no fixed standard Beegah; almost every district has its own local measurement.

ASSAM LAND MEASURE

12 feet = 1 loocer; 20 loocers = 1 cottah; 5 cottahs = 1 hillisah; 4 hillisahs = poorah.

MEASURES OF CAPACITY

1 Imperial gallon = 4 quarts = 8 pints $1 \text{ pint} = 1\frac{1}{4} \text{ lbs. (water)}$

In England, by the term gallon, the Imperial gallon is meant, but in the United States of America the much smaller apothecary's or wine gallon is understood, 1 Imperial gallon being equal to 1-2 wine gallons or 1 wine gallon — 8335 Imperial gallon

1 Wine gallon = 4 quarts = 6 pints.

DICTIONARY OF WIRELESS TERMS

In this Glossary will be found those new words and modern usages which form the regular vocabulary of wireless reception and experiment. A few of the more common words have now become an everyday part of the language and take their place in the dictionary proper, where also will be found the pronunciations and derivations not given here.

accumulator

carrier wave

accumulator n. one or more cells (compended in acid) capable of storing and re-emitting a current of electricity passed into them.

acrial n. an insulated wire or wires generally elevated above the ground and connected to a wireless transmitting or receiving set. A receiving acrial collects the electro-magnetic waves transmitted from a wireless station and conducts them to the receiving set.

Theorem 1. See France

æther n. See ETHER.

alternating current (A.C.) an electric current which reverses its direction of flow at fixed periods, i.e. it starts in one direction from zero increases to a maximum, decreases to zero again, increases in the other direction to a maximum and decreases again to zero, thus completing one cycle.

ammeter n. an instrument for measuring the current in amperes (q.r.)

ampere n. the practical unit of electric one ohm when one volt is applied. Amperage (an'-pär-ij) n. the value of the current in amperes. Ampere-hour n. the practical unit of quantity of electricity, i.e. the quantity which flows in one hour through an electrical circuit carrying a current of one ampere. Thus the quantity of electricity an accumulator will store is rated in ampere-hours. Ampere-turns n.pl. the product of the number of turns in the coils of an electro-magnet and the number of amperes flowing through.

number of amperes flowing through.

amplification (am-pli-fi-kā'-shun) n. the process of increasing the strength of electrical oscillations. Amplification factor (or constant) (of a triode), the maximum voltage amplification the valve can give; the ratio of the change of plate voltage to the change of grid voltage which will bring about the same change in plate current. plate current.

amplifier (am'-pli-f1-er) n. an instrument used to increase the strength of electrical oscillations. It may act at either radio (high) frequency or audio (low) frequency, i.e. in a receiving set, either before or after the oscillations received by the aerial are rectified by the detector value or crystal amplitude n. the maximum or minimum voltage during an alternation; the distance above or below the zero line reached by the crest of an electrical wave.

anode n the positive pole of an electrical cell; the outer electrode of a valve (known as the plate) to which the high-tension voltage is applied; in electrolysis. the point at which the current enters.

antinode (an'-ti-nōd) n. a point in a circuit antinode (arrying alternating currents at which the amplitude of current or voltage is a maximum; also termed loop. (cf. NODE.)

aperiodic (ā-pē-ri-od'-ik) a. without a definite time period; untuned; the term is generally applied to non-oscillatory circuits.

atmospherics (at-mos-fer'-iks) n.p. electrical disturbances in the atmosphery civing rise to irregular noises from the atmosphere, giving rise to irregular noises from the receiving set.

audio-frequency (45%'-di-o tre'-kwen-vibration within the range which can be detected as sound by the human car (in practice between 30 and 10,000 cycles per second).

auto-coupling (aw'-tō-kup'-ling) n. See autodyne (aw'-tō-din) n. a thermionic valve included in a circuit so that it generates oscillations, the grid and plate inductances being part of a common coil.

auto-transformer n. a transformer for reducing in which the primary and secondary windings are part of a common coil.

baffle n. a screen of wood or other non-resonant material used with cone-type loud speakers instead of a horn, to ensure reproduction of the very low audible frequencies.

basket coil a coil made by winding wire in basket fashion on an odd number of radial stems.

battery n. a number of connected cells in which electricity is produced or stored. High-tension battery, a number of cells (dry, wet; primary, or secondary) connected in series to give a pressure of 15 volts or over. Low-tension battery, usually two or three secondary accumulators giving about 6 volts, connected to the filament of a valve to bring it to incandescence.

beam wireless a system of wireless transmission in which the waves are concentrated on the receiver in the form of a beam: it is confined in practice to short wave-lengths.

beat reception wireless reception of continuous waves in which a slightly different frequency is superposed, giving rise to a beat effect which is audible after rectification. Also known as heterodyne reception.

bi-pass condenser (bi-pas) a c blocking condenser a condenser of fixed capacity used to preclude the passage of direct current in a bus bar (bus'-bar) n. a bar or heavy wire forming a common connector for a number of pieces of apparatus.

buzzer n. an electrical instrument with an automatic make-and-break machan buzzer automatic make-and-break mechanism, causing damped oscillations in high-frequency circuits: used for testing receiving sets.

cage aerial an aerial consisting of a num-form of a cylindrical cage. Also called sausage aerial.

Capacity n. (of an accumulator or storage the battery will give at a specified rate of discharge when fully charged. It is measured in practice in ampere-hours. (Of a condenser or isolated body) the quantity of electricity (or charge) it is capable of storing. The unit of capacity is the farad (g.v.) Capacity Coupling, a coupling between two circuits formed by a condenser. Capacity earth, see Counterproject. TERPOISE.

carrier wave high frequency oscillations sent out by a wireless telephone transmitter which act as a base for the modulations reproduced as sound by the receiver. Cascade connection pleces of apparatus are said to be connected in cascade, when the output of the first is connected to the input of the second, the output of the second to the input of the third and so on the third, and so on.

cathode n. the electrode of a thermionic valve method from which electrons are emitted, usually the flament. In electrolysis, the negative pole, the point at which the current leaves.

pole, the point at which the current leaves.

Cat's whisker a fine springy wire used to make light contact with the sensitive points of a crystal in a crystal detector.

Characteristic curve a curve showing the influence on each other of voltage and current in a thermionic valve. Several curves are possible, according to the particular voltage and current taken, and they may be measured with steady values (static ch.) or under working conditions (dynamic ch.).

charge n. See Capacity.

choke n. (high frequency) a coil with an air core to prevent high-frequency currents from passing; (low frequency) a coil with an iron core to prevent low-frequency currents from passing.

condenser n. two, or two groups of, metal plates insulated from one another and capable of receiving and storing electrical energy. See CAPACITY. energy. See CAPACITY.

continuous current another term for continuous current direct current (q.v.). continuous waves (C.W.) anelectrical wave-train with constant amplitudes; undamped counterpoise n. a wire or wires placed directly beneath an aerial and insulated from the earth, thus acting as one plate of a condenser with the earth as the other. Used in some wireless transmitters instead of an earth connection.

Coupling n. a method of transferring electrical method direct connection. A change of current in one circuit produces an E.M.F. across the second circuit.

Cross-talk n. a term used to denote induction between low-frequency circuits.

n. and a. a chemical compound in crystalline form which will pass an electric current in one direction only. Crystal detector, such a crystal arranged in a circuit so that the current passes in one direction only through the telephones. See RECTIFIER.

Current n. the flow of electricity along a conductor from a point of high potential to a point of low potential. The unit of current is the ampere.

the ampere.

Cycle n. See ALTERNATING CURRENT.

damped oscillations (or waves) oscillations or waves in which each successive amplioscillations or waves in which each successive amplitude is smaller than the previous one, the oscillations dying out at a rate depending upon the amount of damping. (Cf. CONTINUOUS WAVES.)

detector n. a device for converting signals received by the aerial into impulses audible in the telephones. (See RECTIFICATION.)

dielectric n. the insulating medium between the plates of a condenser.

diode (di'-5d) n. a thermionic valve having only two electrodes (filament and plate).

direct coupling See AUTO-TRANSFORMER. direct current (D.C.) a current which flows in one direction only.

directional aerial an aerial which is or receiving wireless waves more strongly in one direction than in others.

direction finder an apparatus for deter-from which signals are being received. It makes use of the directional properties of one or other forms of aerial.

dis. n. (collog.) abbreviation for disconnection.

distortion "... any deviation from the original wave-form of the speech or music (with corresponding alteration in the sound heard) which may be brought about during sending and down lead (doun led) See LEAD-IN.

dry cell n. a primary cell in which the liquid dull emitter (6-mit'-gr) a thermionic valve armal emission at a relatively low temperature, with its filament only a dull red.

earth n. any electrical connection to the earth; a plate buried in the soil to which is attached the earth wire. Earth potential, the potential of the earth, assumed as zero in measurements of potential difference. Since the earth has a very large capacity, this potential for practical purposes is constant and uniform. Earth screen, see COUNTEMPOISE. TERPOISE ebonite n. an easily polished black substance of high insulating properties, made by treating rubber with sulphur at high temperaelectric field (of an electrified body) the space near the body in which certain effects can be observed such as the attraction or repulsion of other electrified bodies electrode the current enters or leaves a valve or battery. (See Anode and Cathode.) electrolyte n. a liquid in which chemical changes take place when an electric current is passed through it. A variety of such liquids is used in primary and secondary cells.

electro-magnetic waves See WAVES. electromotive force (E.M.F.) the electrical pressure which overcomes the resistance of a conductor through which a current is passing. The practical unit is the volt.

eliminator n. See MAINS UNIT.

emission n. the stream of electrons given off from the filament of a thermionic ether assumed in order to explain the transmission of wireless, heat and light waves through exponential horn a gramophone or loud diameter (y) increases with the distance from the diaphram (x) in accordance with an exponential law of the form $y = a\varepsilon^{bz}$. fading n. the variation in strength of signals received from a distant station, thought to be due to changes in the atmosphere during the passage of the wireless waves.

farad n. the practical unit of electrical capacity.

filament n. the fine wire in a thermionic valve which is heated by the passage of an electric current, and gives off electrons.

filter n. a circuit of inductances and condensers which will pass or stop certain frequencies, and may thus be used to improve selectivity.

flat tuning is said to obtain in a receiving set when a large change in the inductance or capacity produces only a small change in the strength of the signals heard.

frame aerial an aerial consisting of several turns of wire wound on a rotatable frame used where an outdoor aerial cannot be erected. It has marked directional properties.

frequency n. the number of times the current in an oscillating circuit changes its direction in a certain time (usually per second).

fuse n, a piece of wire inserted as a protective device in an electric circuit. It melts (and thus breaks the circuit) when the current strength exceeds a certain value.

gramophone attachment an elec-trical device for reproducing directly the mechanical vibrations of a gramophone needle as sounds in a loud speaker or modulations in a wireless telephone transmitter.

grid

n. the control electrode of a thermionic valve, usually a helical coil of wire surrounding the filament. Grid bias, the voltage applied to the grid to determine its potential with respect to the filament. Grid leak, a path of high resistance connecting the grid of a valve to the positive or negative terminals of the low-tension battery; a path by means of which the electrons which collect path by means of which the electrons which collect on the grid may escape.

hard valve See THERMIONIC VALVE.

harmonic n. one of the range of frequencies which are exact multiples of the fundamental frequency of a circuit (i.e. the frequency of the wave being transmitted).

henry (hen'-ri) n. the practical unit of inductance. The inductance of a circuit is equal to one henry if an opposing E.M.F. of one volt is set up when the current in the circuit varies at the rate of one ampere per second.

heterodyne (het'-ru-din) a. See Beat Reception.

high frequency (H.F.) a. referring ling currents of frequencies roughly above 12,000 cycles per second.

high tension (H.T.) n. and a. the the anode or plate of a thermionic valve (i.e. high compared with the voltage applied to the filament). See BATTERY.

honeycomb coil a coll resembling a honeycomb in appearance, and wound so as to reduce its self-capacity.

impedance (im-pe-dans) n. the opposition offered to an alternating current to an alternating current content of the content o by a resistance, inductance or capacity, or a combination of these.

bination of these.

inductance said to possess inductance if a current flowing through it causes a magnetic field to be set up around it. Thus a straight wire has inductance, but it is greatly increased if the conductor is in the form of a closely wound coll.

inductive coupling two circuits by means of inductances in the circuits.

interference n. unwanted signals in a wireless receiver due to external causes, e.g. atmospheries, other transmitters, etc.

jamming n. interference, due to other transmitters, with wanted wireless jigger (jig-cr) n. a high-frequency transfor-couple the aerial circuit with the circuit in which oscillations are produced.

kathode n. See Cathode.

kilocycle (kil'-ō-sikl) n. the practical unit of frequency; 100 cycles.
kilowatt (kil'-ō-wot) n. the practical unit of frequency; 1000 watts.
(746 watts=1 horse-power).
lead-in (lēd-in) n. a wire connecting the aerial and the aerial terminal of a wireless transmitter or receiver.

lightning arrester a device arranged between the aerial and the earth to provide a short circuit for lightning discharges and so protect the receiving set.

loading coil an extra coil placed in the aerial can be tuned.

local oscillator a circuit producing oscillator lations "locally" for local Oscillator lations "locally" for use in beat reception (q.v.).

loose-coupling so separated that the mutual inductance between them is small compared with their self-inductances.

loud speaker a form of telephone with horn attachment for rendering received signals more generally audible.

low frequency (L.F.) a. referring to to about 12,000 cycles per second.

low tension (L.T.) n. (and a.) the the filament of a thermionic valve (i.e. low compared with the voltage applied to the anode). See BATTERY.

mains unit (manz) an apparatus for supplying power to a wireless sot from the electricity supply mains, at one or all of the voltages required. (Also known as an elimimagnetic field (of a magnetised body or current) the space near the body or coil in which certain effects can be observed such as the attraction or repulsion of other magnetised bodies.

megohm (meg'-ōm) n. one million ohms.

micro- prefix denoting "one millionth of"; used to denote various convenient practical units as: microampere, microfarad, micro-microphone (mi'-krō-fōn) n. an instrument loud; any instrument which will convert sounds waves into electrical currents (and so enable them to be transmitted as wireless waves).

milli- prefix denoting "one thousandth of," as millivolt, milliampere.

modulation n. the variation of the amplitude of the continuous (carrier) waves by the electrical form of the sound received by the microphone. The variations themselves are at audio frequency, and are rectified and reproduced as sounds by the receiving set.

moving coil loud speaker a loud speaker in which vibrations are transmitted to a conical diaphragm by a coil which moves in a magnetic field in accordance with the currents from the rectifier which pass through it.

mutual inductance a term applied to two colls upon one another due to the magnetic fields set up by the currents passing through each of them. A changing current in one coll produces an E.M.F. across the other.

natural frequency the electrical oscillations set up in a circuit when it is allowed to oscillate freely. Its value for each circuit depends oscillate freely. Its value for each circuit depends upon the inductance and capacity only.

negative pole a pole that is at a lower other—the positive pole. Electrons flow from negative to positive, but it is generally assumed that current flows from positive to negative.

neutrodyne receiver (nutro-din neutrodyne in which the capacity between the valve electrodes is neutralised by a special circuit, thus checking the tendency to burst into self-oscillation.

node n. a point in a circuit carrying alternating currents at which the amplitude of current or voltage is a minimum. (Cf. ANTINODE.)

ohm n. the practical unit of resistance.

OSCIllations n.pl. the high frequency alternating current which flows round a circuit when it has been set in electrical vibration. The circuit is said to be oscillating—a condition sometimes produced by the too-tight coupling of the reaction and grid coils in a receiving set, when oscillations independent of the incoming signals may be set up and interfere with neighbouroscillator n. an apparatus for producing oscillator electrical oscillations. Oscillator valve, a thermionic valve in a circuit used for producing oscillations.

parallel connection two or more pieces of wire or apparatus are said to be connected in parallel when they are joined across a common voltage supply.

pentode (pent-tod) n. a thermionic valve having five electrodes.—a filament, a plate, and three grids.

perikon detector (per'-i-kon) a crystal detector of bornite in contact with zincite.

photo-electric cell a cell in which off from a plate (the resistance of the cell therefore changing) according to the amount of light falling upon it.

picture transmission a system of transmission of still pictures by wireless or line telegraphy.

plate

n. the anode of a thermionic valve; the electrode to which the high tension voltage is applied.

voltage is applied.

plug n. a device used (in conjunction with a socket) to facilitate connection and disconnection between two portions of an electrical circuit. Plug-in coil, an inductance coil with plug and socket terminals to facilitate quick coil changing.

positive pole See Negative Pole.

potential n. a point is said to have a potential with respect to another point in the same circuit, the potential difference between the two measuring the force tending to drive electricity from the point of higher to the point of lower potential. Potential difference is measured in volts. potential. Potential difference is measured in votas.

potential divider a device used for applying a required potential at any point in a circuit, formed by tapping a resistance across which a voltage has been placed.

potentiometer (po-ten'-shi-om'-e-tgr) n. the accurate measurement of difference of potential. The term is often used to indicate a potential divider (n n) divider (q.v.).

power amplifier an amplifier designed speaker, i.e. one which will handle high power at the low frequency without distortion. Power valve, a thermionic valve designed to deal with a large output without distortion.

primary cell a source of electrical energy, obtained from chemical action within it. The changes occurring are non-reversible, i.e. such a cell cannot be recharged. (Cf. SECONDARY CELL.)

primary circuit (or coil) the circuit (or coil) primary circuit (or coil) the circuit primary circuit (or coil) which takes the power from the source of supply, passing it on to the secondary circuit (or coil) radiation n. the sending-out of electrical electron the sending-out of electron magnetic waves, esp. by means of an aerial.

radio frequency (rat-di-0) n. and a. See reactance (ra-di-tans) n. the resistance due to the presence of inductance or capacity or both in a circuit. (Cf. Impedance.)

reaction n. the returning of energy in a three-electrode valve circuit from the amplified currents in the plate circuit from the amplified currents in the plate circuit to the grid circuit, thus compensating to any desired extent for the losses in that circuit. It is generally effected by coupling inductance coils in the two circuits; if this coupling is too tight self-oscillation is set up with possible interference with near-by sets. rectification alternating current into a pulsating current flowing in one direction only. The operation is performed by a rectifier (detector, or rectifying valve), and is a necessary stage in a receiving set since alternating current will produce no sound in the telephones.

reflex circuit a circuit containing a high-capital self-oscillation as high-power broad-casting station designed to serve a large area.

to serve a large area.

relay (re'-la) n. a device by which a weak current is made to control a circuit of high current.

relay station a low-power station which broadcasts items mostly received from a distant station by telephone line.

resistance n. the property possessed by all substances of offering opposition a greater or loss degree to the possess of one in a greater or less degree to the passage of an clectric current; a conductor used to give a fixed or variable value of resistance to a circuit. The power wasted in a resistance appears as heat. The practical unit is the ohm.

coupling esistance-capacity a method of coupling, generally between the anode of one valve and the grid of the next, by means of a resistance and a condenser resistance and a concensor.

Tesonance when an imposed alternating potential has the same frequency as the natural frequency of the circuit. Under these conditions the incoming oscillations produce the maximum effect in the receiving circuit.

retroactive coupling see Reaction.
rheostat n. a variable resistance used to control the flow of current in a circuit.
screen-grid valve a four electrode grids, used especially in multi-stage high-frequency amplifiers. The valve is designed to reduce the capacity between the anode and the control grid.
screening n. a device to prevent one circuit carrying alternating current from affecting another near it (ucually a sheet of copper placed between the two circuits).

Secondary cell a source of electrical energy derived from reversible chemical changes within it. Such a cell can be recharged by passing a current through it in the reverse direction. ((f. PRIMARY CELL.)

secondary circuit (or see Primary Circuit (of Conjuge Primary Circuit) (se-lek-tiv'-i-ti) n. the power of selectivity being able to receive one particular wave-length with the exclusion of others. selenium cell a primary cell whose resistance varies according to the strength of the light falling upon it. self-capacity n. the capacity that exists between different parts of the same piece of apparatus, as between the turns of an inductance coil. of an inductance coil.

self-inductance n. the inductance in a coll of wire due to a change in the current passing through it. A back E.M.F. is produced tending to stop the change from taking place.

Series connection two or more conductors or cells, etc., are said to be connected in series when the same current traverses them all in turn, the voltage being applied across the beginning and end of the sharp tuning is said to obtain in a receiving set when a small change in the inductance or capacity produces a large change in the strength of the signal heard.

short-circuit n. a connection of very low resistance made between two parts of a circuit. If the connection is made accidentally, the sudden rise in current due to the drop in the resistance may cause damage to other parts of the circuit.

smoothing circuit a device used for ting component from a unidirectional current, such as that obtained from a rectifier.

SOft valve See THERMIONIC VALVE.

n. a wooden strut used for separating the parallel wires of spreader an aerial.

Statics n.pl. another term for ATMOSPHERICS.

storage battery See ACCUMULATOR.

Strays n.pl. another term for ATMOSPHERICS. sulphating n. a white deposit (of lead plates of an accumulator when it is left uncharged for a long time.

supersonic frequency (sū-per-son'-quency which is just above the range the ear is able to detect.

telephone an instrument employed for converting electrical energy into sound waves. A soft iron diaphragm is set in vibration by an electro-magnet actuated by the pulsating current from the receiving set.

tetrode (tot'-rôd) n. a thermionic valve having four electrodes (a cathode (filament).

two grids, and an anode).

thermionic valve a highly evacuated tube containing two or more electrodes (usually filament, grid and anode). Its action, which forms the basis of all modern wireless telegraphy and telephony, depends upon the (unidirectional) flow of electrons given off by the hot filament towards the anode, and the control of this flow by the grid. Hard valve, one exhausted to a high vacuum. Soft valve, one in which a small amount of residual gas is left in the tube.

tight coupling coupling of two coils placed so close together that the mutual inductance between them is large in comparison with their self-inductances.

time signal a signal given exactly at a fixed time, for the regulation of clocks, etc. The Greenwich time signal consists of six dot-seconds, the first at five seconds before the hour, the sixth exactly at the hour.

transformer n. an instrument, consisting of the currents wo tightly coupled windings, for changing the voltage of an alternating current supply. Its design depends upon the frequency of the currents to be transformed, and the change of voltage is dependent upon the ratio of the number the currents to be transformed, and the change of voltage is dependent upon the ratio of the number of turns in the two windings. Step-up transformer, one which contains a greater number of turns in the secondary winding than in the primary, the secondary voltage being higher, and the secondary current lower, than that in the primary. Step-down transformer, one in which the secondary voltage is lower and the secondary current higher than that in the primary. in the primary.

trickle charger an accumulator charger which charges at a low rate (hence the accumulator can be left on charge over night).

triode (tri'-ōd) n. a thermionic valve containing three electrodes, a cathode (filament).

grid and anode.

tuning n. the operation of adjusting a circuit tuning (by varying the value of its inductance and capacity) to give resonance at a desired frequency. In a receiving set the circuit is tuned to give resonance at the frequency of the incoming signals, since under these conditions the signals will have the maximum effect. Tuning condenser, a condenser whose capacity can be varied for the process of tuning. Tuning note, a steady note broadcast before the actual programme begins, so that listeners can tune in their receivers to the best advantage.

undamped oscillations a train of oscillations with constant amplitude. (See Continuous Waves.) valve n. and a. See Thermionic Valve variable condenser n. a condenser capacity can be conveniently altered.

Variocoupler (vār-i-ō-kup -ler) n. a coupling consisting of two inductance coils, the amount of coupling between which can be varied by moving them relatively to one another.

variometer n. a variable inductance consisting of two colls connected in series, one of which rotates within the other.

VOlt n. the practical unit of electro-motive force. volt n. the practical unit of electro-morive force.

voltmeter (volt'-mē-ter) n. an instrument used for the measurement of electro-motive force in volts.

wander-plug n. a plug attached to a flexible wire to make contact with any one of a number of points.

watt n. the practical unit of electrical power. The wattage is the product of the volts and amperes in a direct current circuit.

amperes in a direct current circuit.

Waves (electrical) n.pl. a series of periodic alternations in direction of electric and magnetic (orces, produced by electric oscillations in a conductor and propagated through space at a fixed velocity of 300 million metres per second.

Wave form the shape of the curve obtained quantity (e.g. force or current values) are plotted in graph form on a time base.

Wave-length n. the distance between the waves, i.e. in a train of wireless waves, the distance between one maximum amplitude of force and the next in the same direction.

wave meter an apparatus for measuring wave-length.

wave trap a circuit tuned to intercept frequency it is desired to receive or to receive that frequency only.

X's (ex'-ez) n.pl. a term for ATMOSPHERICS.

Fate. fár, ado: mē. her; mine; note: tune; moon.

MOTORING & AVIATION DICTIONARY OF TECHNICAL TERMS

This glossary contains the new words, extended meanings and modern usages which have become part of the regular vocabulary of Motoring and Aviation. The more common words and more general meanings which are familiar in everyday language take their place in the dictionary proper, where also will be found the pronunciations and derivations not given here.

accelerator

accelerator n. a device for increasing the speed of a car by opening the throttle of the carburctor, thus allowing more fuel to enter the cylinder. It is operated by a podal or a hand lever or both.

advance and retard See TIMING.

aerofoil (â-e-rō-foil) n. the supporting surface of an aeroplane, the wing.
aileron n. a controlling surface or flap usually fitted near the wing tip of an aeroplane by means of which the aeroplane is turned about a longitudinal axis.
air filter a filter for extracting dust and grit form the air before it enters the air pocket a local partial vacuum in the air causing aircraft to drop suddenly. airscrew n. the propellor of an aeroplane.

airscrew torque the tendency of an airplane bodily in the opposite direction to that in which the airscrew is rovolving.

altimeter

n. an instrument for measuring the height at which an aeroplane apron n. an undershield to protect the crankcase apron of a car from stones, mud, etc.

artillery wheel a wood or netal wheel in which the load is taken by spokes in compression.

aspect ratio the relation between the length and width (span and chord) of an aerofoil.

an aerofoil.

autovac (aw'-tō-vak) n. a device for drawing petrol from the main tank by suction to a small auxiliary tank which provides a constant gravity supply to the carburettor.

back-fire n. a reversal of the direction in which an engine is turning; also wrongly applied to an explosion of unburnt gases in the siloncer.

the siloncer.

back pressure a braking effect exerted on the pistons of an engine by burnt gases in the cylinder and exhaust system which are not escaping quickly enough.

which are not escaping quickly enough.

baffle-plate n. a plate for deflecting the flow of a liquid or gas, e.g. on the piston of a two-stroke engine, in silencers, or to prevent too much oil or oil mist entering the cylinder from the crankcase.

ball and roller bearings devices for ing sliding contact, as in plain bearings, into rolling contact, so as to reduce friction.

ball change a type of gear-changing mechanism without a visible gate.

bank v.l. to tilt an aeroplane sideways when turning to the right or left. Of roads, to make them so that the camber is always to the inside of bends.

inside of bends.

bendix gear (ben'-diks gör) a pinion device the engine has started.

benzol n. a by-product of the manufacture of coal gas, used, usually mixed with petrol, as fuel.

big end strictly, that end of the connecting rod attached to the crankshaft, usually used to mean the bearing at that point.

blower n. (collog.) a supercharger.

body n. the coachwork of a car.

bonnet n. that part of the car body covering the engine.

boot n. the space in a car body underneath and behind the back soat.

DOTE n. the internal diameter of a cylinder.

DOSS n. a circular projection on a part.

brake n. a frictional device which stops the car by converting its kinetic energy into heat which is dissipated into the air. Brake drum, the rotating part of a brake, fixed to a wheel or to a propellor shatt. Brake shoe, the fixed part of the brake which when actuated by movement of the brake lever or pedal rubs against the drum.

breather n. a valve in the crankcase preventing the air pressure there from rising unduly.

cabre (kā'-ber) v. to fly tail down.

cabriolet n. a type of car body which can be entirely opened or closed at will.

cam n. a projection on a shaft used to actuate a lever or other part at each revolution of the shaft. Camshaft (kam shaft) n. the shaft, rotating at half the speed of the crankshaft, on which cams are formed for opening the valves.

camber n. the curvature of an aerofoll; the camber gurvature of a road from the centre to each gutter

canard n. an aeroplane in which the airscrow is behind the mainplanes; an aeroplane in which the smaller supporting surface is in front, a tail-first aeroplane.

carburettor, carburetter (kar-būnett-gr)n.

a device connected with the petrol tank for converting the petrol into vapour and mixing it with a proportion of air.

verting the petrol into vapour and mixing it with a proportion of air.

Cardan shaft (kård'-an-shaft) a term used to indicate uny shaft transmitting power; the propellor shaft.

Castle nut a nut which has its outside face grooved so that it can be secured to its bolt or stud by a split pin.

Chassis (sha'-sō) n. a complete car minus the body.

Chock n. an object such as a wedge of wood placed under one of the wheels to prevent a car or aeroplane from moving.

Choke tube a tube fitted inside a carbureror choke tube a tube fitted inside a carbureror increase the velocity of the gas passing through it.

Clutch n. a device, usually depending on friction, for connecting at will the engine with the transmission gear. Clutch stop, a brake acting on the clutch shaft which reduces its speed and consequently that of the primary shaft of the gearbox. Usually brought into operation by depressing fully the clutch pedal.

COCKpit (kok'-pit) n. that part of an aeroplane in which the pilot sits.

coil n. a device for inducing high voltage, used to transform the accumulator low-tension current to the voltage required for ignition purposes, i.e. about 5000 volts. A device is also incorporated which makes and breaks the current across the sparking plug points at the correct moment in the cycle of operations.

combustion chamber the space inside a cylinder where the explosion occurs.

Compensation n. the term applied to the division of braking force botween front and back wheels and to the equalisation of the pressure applied to each front and each back wheel when the brakes are applied.

Compression n. usually, "gas-tightness" (absence of leakage past the piston rings and valves) in a combustion chamber. Compression ratio the ratio, usually 7 to 1, between the internal volumes of the cylinder above the piston when the piston is at the bottom and at the top of its stroke.

Compression stroke See CYCLE OF OPERATIONS.

Cone clutch a type of friction clutch in which the frustum of a cone slides axially into a cavity in the flywheel.

Connecting rod that part in an engine which transforms the reciprocating motion of the piston into the circular motion of the crankshaft.

COUPÉ n. a car with a two-seater enclosed body. crankcase (krank'-kās) n. the case carrying the bearings in which the crank-shaft revolves.

Crankpin (krank'-pin) n. a part of the crank-pin shaft which forms the big-end bearing with the connecting rod.

Crankshaft (krank'-shaft) n. the principal shaft in the engine, connected to the propellor of an aeroplane, or, through the clutch, to the road wheels of a cnr.

Crown wheel the large bevel wheel on the back axle which is driven by the bevel pinion on the propeller shaft.

Cut out a device which disconnects the dynamo from the accumulator at low engine speeds; a device for allowing the exhaust gases to escape into the atmosphere without first passing through the silencer.

Cycle of operations the series of passing through the silencer.

Cycle of operations the series of movements that occurs in the cylinder of an internal combustion engine. In a four-stroke engine, in which a spark occurs in each cylinder once during each two revolutions of the crankshaft, the cycle is (a) induction or suction (piston moving down, inlet valve open): (b) compression (piston moving up, both valves shut); (d) exhaust (piston moving up, both valves shut); (d) exhaust (piston moving up, exhaust valve open). In a two-stroke engine the exhaust and inlet processes occur simultaneously between the firing stroke and the following compression stroke.

cylinder n. the part containing the combuspiston moves up and down. Cylinder barrel, that part of the cylinder in which the piston reciprocates.
Cylinder block, the casting consisting of the cylinder barrels and the water jacket. Cylinder capacity, in cubic centimetres, is, for the purpose of measuring size of an engine, the swept volume of the piston multiplied by the number of pistons in the engine.
Cylinder head, the upper—often detachable—part of the cylinder holding the valves and sparking plugs.

of the cylinder holding the valves and sparking plugs.

damper n. a device for deadening the shock of sudden movement, used on car suspension systems and steering gear.

dash board (dash) n. the board or diver holding the gauges and controls.

dead centre the term applied to those positions in the cycle of operations when the piston is at the bottom or top of its stroke, when thrust on the piston produces no turning effect on the crankshaft.

decarbonise v.t. to clean the combustion chamber of carbon, etc.

declutch (do-kluch') v.f. to take the clutch out of engagement.

decoke (de-kōk') (collog.) v.t. to decarbonise.

differential n. a system of gear wheels enabling the two rear wheels of a car to revolve at different speeds, as when going round a corner, although they are both geared with the propeller shaft.

dihedral angle the angle between two tudinal angle between the main surfaces and tail.

dipstick (dip'stik) n. a measuring rod or stick for showing the quantity of oil in the sump in the sump.

direct drive denotes that the power from the engine is being transmitted directly and not through any wheels in the gear box.

distributor n. a part of a magneto or coil sparking plugs in the correct sequence.

dope n. a preparation for coating the fabric of aeroplane wings and of gasbags of airships to render them airtight and, to tighten them; (colloy,) alcohol motor fuel.

double declutch when changing gear, to pause in neutral and engaging the desired gear.

engage the clutch, and then to declutch again before engaging the desired gear.

drift n. air resistance to the motion of an aeroplane, sometimes termed head resistance, dry-sump (dri'-sump) a. that type of lubrication in which there is not any great quantity of oil in the sump. The lubricant is forced into the engine bearings and after draining into the sump is pumped away, usually through a filter, and possibly through a cooling radiator, either to a tank or into the oiling circuit again.

dumb iron an extension of a longitudinal frame member to which the end of a spring is secured.

of a spring is secured.

elevator n. a controlling surface of an aero-plane, usually hinged to the tail-plane, for making the aeroplane ascend or descend. empennage n. See Tailplank.

epicylic gear (ep-i-si'-klik ger) an arrange-ment of gear wheels in which a number of small wheels revolve about a central a number of small wheels revolve about a central wheel, a planotary gear.

exhaust n. the waste gases from an engine, consisting principally of carbon dioxide, unburnt and partly burnt fuel, and water vapour. Exhaust pipe, the pipe for conveying the burnt gases from the cylinders to the silencer. Exhaust port, the passage in the cylinder, closed by the exhaust valve, through which the burnt gases are expelled. Exhaust stroke, sec CYCLE OF OFERATIONS. Exhaust valve, the valve in the cylinder which is opened during the exhaust stroke to allow the burnt gases to be expelled by the piston. fairing n. a covering for certain struts of an fairing n. a covering for certain struts of them; see also STREAMLINE.

fin n. the fixed portion of the rudder of an aeroplane.

firing stroke See Cycle of Operations.

float n. a hollow metal box connected to the needle valve, which regulates the flow of petrol to the carburettor. float chamber that part of the carburettor containing the float. fluid flywheel a type of clutch in which hydraulically (by oil pressure). flood v.t. to allow the carburettor to fill with petrol by holding the needle valve off its reating.

flywheel n. a heavily rimmed wheel attached to the crankshatt, which, by its momentum, keeps the engine moving smoothly between the firing impulses.

four stroke engine that type in which finder occurs once in each two complete revolutions of the orankshaft.

fourwheel brakes (F.W.B.) indicate that a car has brakes on all four wheels. Also Front Wheel Brakes.

frame n. the structural part of the car which carries the body and the mechanism.

front wheel drive (F.W.D.) indicate that power is applied to the front wheels of a car and not to the back wheels.

full elliptics a type of spring in which two half elliptics oppose each fuselage n. the body of an aeroplane, without the wings and tail.

gap n. the distance between the upper and lower supporting surfaces of a biplane.

gas n. (in U.S.) contraction for gasoline, or petrol.

gasket n. a washer between parts such as the cylinder head and cylinder block, usually made of copper and asbessos.

gate change a type of gear-changing mechanism in which the gear lever is placed in slots in a quadrant to obtain the various speeds.

gear box the casing containing the gear various speeds.

gear box the casing containing the gear warious speeds.

gear box the casing containing the gear changing mechanism. Gear change, an arrangement of goar wheels which permits the engine to be connected to the rear wheels in several ratios at will, so that, for a given engine speed, the road wheels will revolve at different speeds, varying from first (slowest) to top—usually third or fourth—(fastest). A device is also included allowing the engine to drive the car backwards. Gear wheel, any toothed wheel, whother of the parallel spur, skew, bevel, or worm variety.

geared-up top usually in top gear the or solid with the road wheels, but a ratio may be or solid with the road wheels, but a ratio may be provided by gearing, in which the road wheels revolve faster than they would do if connected direct with the engine at the same engine speed. This is termed "geared-up top."

gilled radiator (gild rā'-di-ā-tçr) a radia-tor made up of tubes through which the hot water from the water jacket passes, cooled on their outsides by the air.

gland n. a box or cup round a rotating or gland n. a box or our round a rotating or sliding shaft containing stuffing, such as felt to prevent leakage of gas, water, or oil, as the case may be.

gravity feed denotes that the petrol tank is above the carburettor and that the latter is supplied by gravity only, as opposed to the vacuum or "autovac" system of fuel feed.

grease cup a cup-shaped lubricator pro-opening at the bottom on to the moving part to be lubricated, so that when the cap is screwed down the oil or grease in the cup is forced into the bearing. grind-in valves to give valves a gas-tight joint with their seatings by means of an abrasive.

gudgeon pin the pin holding the piston to half elliptics a type of spring shaped as an are of a circle or ellipse for supporting the body on the axles. The two ends are attached to the frame and the centre of the arc to the axle.

half-speed shaft a shaft, such as the half the speed of the crankshaft. (Also Half-Time hand-brake n. a brake applied by a hand lever. The working parts may be entirely different from those of the foot brake, or they may be partially or entirely the same, in which latter case the braking system will be illegal.

head resistance See DRIFT.

helical gear See Skew Gear.

helicopter (bel'-i-kop-ter) n. an aeroplane which can ascend vertically.

honeycomb radiator a radiator in arranged horizontally so that water flows over their outer surfaces while cooling air flows through them.

hot spot a device in the induction system for warming the gases entering the cylinders—heated usually from the exhaust pipe.

housing n. a cavity in a stationary structural part for the accommodation of a ball or roller bearing.

or roller bearing.

hub n. the centre part of a wheel, especially applied to wire wheels. Hub cap, the screwed-on cap covering the end of the axle.

hypoid (hi'-poid) a. a type of gearing between propellor shaft and back axle, which eccupies comparatively little verticle space.

idling (id'-ling) ppr. (or "ticking over") a term denoting that an engine is turning over just fast enough to keep moving.

ignition n. the firing of the explosive charge in the cylinder.

ignition in the cylinder.

incidence, angle of in the angle made hy the chord of an aerofoil with the axis of the airscrew.

induction in the action of the piston in drawing the petrol gas from the carburettor into the cylinder. Induction pipe, the pipe connecting the carburettor and the cylinder. Induction stroke, see Cycle or Operations.

inlet valve the valve in the cylinder which is opened during the induction or suction stroke to admit fuel from the carburettor. Jack in a device for litting heavy weights from that one or more wheels are clear of the ground. Jet in a small orifice in the carburettor through which petrol is sucked in a fine stream.

Jockey pulley a pulley rotating on an ally used to take up slackness in a bolt.

Journal in that part of a shaft running in a bearing.

joy stick the control lever of an aeroplane.

key n. a small piece of metal for connecting rigidly such parts as shafts and wheels. The key fits into a key-way or groove cut in each part. Knocking npn. a peculiar engine noise indicating worn bearings, or wrong inixture, or wrong ignition timing, or overheating. kingpost (king-post) n. a strut or post to plane are attached.

lane are attached. landaulet n. a type of body in which the rear section can be opened or closed at will, while the front part remains per-closed at will, while the front part remains permanently standing.

lap v.t. to ensure perfect fitting of moving parts by moving them by hand with some very fine abrasive such as jeweller's rouge or metal polish potween the bearing surfaces.

lay shaft an intermediate shaft for transmitting motion through gearing.

liner n. a cylindrical part fitted into a hole to make its internal diameter smaller, or in cylinders or bearings to provide a renewable or renewed wearing surface.

loading n. the weight carried by an seroplane longeron (lon-jer-on) n. any long spar running core and aft of an aeroplane fusclage. Little end the bearing between the connecting rod and the gudgeon pin.

main bearing a crankshaft bearing.

manifold n. the term applied to inlet and exhaust pipes when branched to lead to and from multi-cylindered engines.

misfire (mis-fir') n. occurs when a charge of the for some reason passes out of the cylinder unexploded. mixture n. the term for the combination of petrol and air which is to be exploded in the cylinder.

MUShroom valve See Poppet Valve.

nacelle (nā'-sel) n. that part of an aeroplane which houses the engine, pilot, and passengers.

needle valve a taper-ended steel needle connected to the float of a carburettor which shuts off the petrol as the float nipple of spokes in wire wheels, connects them to the rim; that part which, soldered to the ends of petrol and oil pipes, connects them to the engine or tank.

oldham coupling (old'-am kup'-ling) a form of flexible shaft coupling, used for propeller shafts.

otto cycle (ot'-ë-sikl) the four-stroke cycle (See CYCLE OF OPERATIONS).

overhead camshaft (O.H.C.) indicates are actuated by a camshaft which is situated on the cylinder head and not immediately alongside the crankshaft. crankshaft.

overhead valves (O.H.V.) indicates that the valves are contained in the upper part of the cylinder head.

overlap n. occurs if, between the exhaust and induction strokes, the inlet valve is opened before the exhaust valve is shut.

Packing a part to raise it to a required height; material put into a gland to make it gas or fluid tight.

petrol gauge an instrument which indicates the amount of petrol in the tank.

phaeton n. an ordinary open touring car.

pilot jet an auxiliary tot in a carburettor used for starting and slow running.

pilot tube an air-speed indicator consisting the direction of flight.

pinion n. the smaller of any two gear wheels in mesh.

pinking (ping'-king) n. an engine noise similar to knocking (q,v).

piston n. a plunger transmitting the working pressure of the burning gases to the connecting rod and so to the crankshaft. Piston ring, a split ring litting in a groove round the piston, which springs outwards making a gas-light but sliding fit in the cylinder barrol. Piston slap, a noise occurring when the piston is too loose a fit in the cylinder, e.g. when the engine is cold.

pitch n. the distance an airscrew advances during one revolution; the distance between the centres of holes drilled in (say) a plate; the distance between the tops of consecutive threads of a screw.

threads of a screw.

pitting (pit-ing) n. the uneven wearing of pitting surfaces, e.g. valve seatings.

plain bearings bearings offering sliding contact.

planetary gear See Epicyclic Gear.

plate clutch a clutch depending for its action on friction between the surfaces of plates.

plug n. See Sparking Plug.

poppet valve a valve shaped like a mush-room (often called a mush-room valve) in which the under edge of the mush-room head bears on the seating.

popping back a noise in the carburettor ploding in the cylinder or inlet pipe before the inlet valve is shut.

POTT n. an inlet or exhaust passage in a cylinder.

pre-ignition occurs when for any reason occurs too early in the cycle of operations.

pressure feed a type of fuel feed in which air pressure is created in the petrol tank by a pump, which forces the petrol out of the tank to the carburetter.

primary shaft the driving shaft in a gear-propellor shaft the shaft transmitting engine or gearbox of a car to the rear axle. push rod a particular form of tappet used in overhead valve engines.

pylon n. a V-shaped construction in an aero-plane from which wires are taken; a landmark on an aerodrome.

landmark on an aerodrome.

racing an engine allowing an engine to run too fast.

radiator n. a device for cooling the weter contained in the cylinder jroket by leading it through small tubes which allow the maximum contact with the outside air. Radiator shutters, shutters in front of the radiator, which when closed either by hand or automatically, prevent the air from passing through the radiator, and so prevent over-cooling.

radius rod the red anchoring the back axle longitudinally to the frame.

remou (re-mōō) n. air eddies.

retard n. See TIMING.

reverse stop (or catch) a device for proventing reverse gear being engaged accidentally.

rim

n. that part of a road wheel which accommodates the tyre.

modates the tyre.

rocking lever a lever, often L-shaped, used particularly in brake or valve mechanism. In the latter it is called simply a rocker.

roller bearing See Ball and Roller tunning in driving a new car slowly for a period in order to allow all the bearings in the engine and chassis to bed saloon n. a closed car with two seats, each holding two or three persons, with no partition behind the driver.

scraper ring a piston ring whose function is to scrape excess oil from the walls of the cylinder.

scuttle n. that part of a car body between the bonnet and the windscreen.

Seating n. See VALVE SEATING.

seize v.t. to jam tightly (of a piston or hearing) usually through overheating, to bind. selector n. the mechanism by which the various gears are engaged when the gear lever is moved.

self-energising a term applied to brakes servo action (ser'-vō) use of power to operate a control, esp. brakes.

Semi elliptics See HALF ELLIPTICS.

shackle n. a double link joint as used in connecting the ends of springs to the frame.

shock absorbers dampers (q.v.) used in car suspension silencer (si'-len-ser) n. a box through which the exhaust gases of a petrol engine pass before being expelled into the air.

silent chain (or inverted tooth chain) a chain with a special type of link which partly adjusts itself to wear on the chain wheel and so is more silent than the normal type.

silent third a term denoting that third speed is practically as silent as the direct top gear—the silence being achieved by the use of special types of gear wheels.

Skew gear an arrangement of gear wheels which have their teeth cut diagonally so that each tooth comes into engagement gradually.

sleeve valve engine an engine in which holes are cut, slides in the cylinder wall so that at appropriate times in the cycle of operations the holes register with ports cut in the cylinder wall.

Slip n. the pitch of an airscrew less the distance denoting that the roar wheels of a car are revolving without the car moving forward as far as it should, wheelspin. wheelspin.

slotted wing a device consisting of a small main alleron by which control of an aeroplane is retained after stalling would normally take place.

Span  the distance from wing tip to wing tip of an aeroplane.

sparking plug a device by which the brought inside the cylinder, having two electrodes or points, across which the current jumps by sparking to ignite the compressed gas.

Spiggot bearing a type of bearing often found in gear boxes, where the end of one shaft is hollowed out to form a bearing for another shaft.

sportsman's coupé a coupe with two seats behind the principal seats.

Sprag

n. a ratchet and pawl mechanism to prevent a car running backwards on a squab n. a car seat.

stagger n. the distance one moving surface of a biplane is in advance of another; v.t. parts are said to be staggered when they are alternately sloped one way and the other. stall v.t. to elevate an aeroplane at such an angle that it cannot make forward motion.

steering column the column carrying the steering wheel.

steering lock the maximum angular amount the front wheels can be swivelled from side to side.

streamline v.t. to shape the outside of a part, e.g. a can body or acroplane tuselage, so that it offers the least possible resistance to the air.

stroke n. in engine measurement, the distance the piston travels up and down in the cylinder, i.e. the diameter of the circle described by the centre of the crank pin.

Strut n. any short spar in an acroplane.

stub axle short swivelling axle on which cuch steering road wheel runs.

stud n. a headless bolt screwed into a part, with a screwed portion left projecting above the SUCTION STOKE See CYCLE OF OPERATIONS. sump ". a well in the bottom of the crankcase containing oil.

supercharging n. a system of forcing air and fuel into an engine, as opposed to the normal method in which the fuel is sucked into the engine.

Suspension n. the system of springs, etc., of a car on the wheels and axles.

tailplane (tail-plan) n. a stabilising surface arranged some distance behind the main aerofoils.

main aerofolls.

tappet n. a short steel rod bearing on a cam tappet and conveying its lift to a valve (n.c.).

Tappet guide, the stationary tubular part holding the tappet in position and in which it moves.

thermal efficiency the work obtained by the thermal value of the two work represented by the thermal value of the fuel consumed.

thermo syphon that system of engine convection currents in the water to carry the hot water from the cylinder lacket to the radiator and cool water from the radiator to the cylinder jacket three quarter elliptic a half elliptic spring with a further short spring in place of a dumb iron.

throttle n. a valve controlling the admission to the engine.

to the engine.

ticking over See IDLING.

tickling ppr. flooding the carburetter by depressing the float with the "tick. ler" which holds the needle valve from its seatingtiming n. the position in the cycle of operations of (1) the spark (ignition timing), and (2) the opening and closing of the valves (valve timing). (1) is arranged to occur just before the completion of the compression stroke, and can usually be varied by hand from the dash to occur slightly earlier (advanced) or later (retarded). (2) The length of time a valve remains open can only be varied by the design of the cam, but the opening can be made to occur earlier or later by revolving the camshaft slightly in relation to the crankshaft Any alteration to the time of opening will similarly affect the time of closing. See Valve.

torque n. the turning effort on a shaft or rotating part.

torque reaction the tendency of a stationary part to turn about a rotating member.

torque rod a part connecting the rear axie to the frame to counteract the tendency of the axle to turn about the propellor torque tube a tube enclosing the propellor shaft combining the functions of torque rod and radius rod.

tractor n. an airscrew with revolves in front of the main supporting surfaces of an transverse springs springs lying across the chassis, not longitudinally.

tune v.i. to adjust a piece of mechanism to get the best possible results.

turbulence n. the state of whirling move-cylinders should be when ignited. Turbulence is affected by the shape of the inlet passage and port and the cylinder head and is an advantage because the anected by the shape of the linit passage and port and the oylinder head and is an advantage because the flame is propagated more quickly and there is less gas unburnt and so wasted after each firing stroke.

twin top the same as "silent third" but achieved through the use of two direct drives or through the third gear being direct and top gear geared up.

two stroke that type of engine in which ignition in each cylinder occurs once during each revolution of the crankshaft.

universal joint a joint which imparts flexibility to a rotating shaft, employed at the ends of propellor shafts.

shaft, employed at the ends of propellor shafts.

valve n. that part which allows fuel to enter and burnt gases to escape from the cylinder. Poppet or Mushroom valves consist of a head which lits the port in the cylinder, the point of contact being the seating: and a stem, to which the head is attached, which reciprocates in its guide. As the engine revolves, the camshaft is driven at half the engine speed and each valve is therefore opened once in each two revolutions of the crank-shaft, that is, once in each cycle of operations. The cam actuates a rocker, which in turn moves a tappet, which again moves the valve stem against the valve spring, thus opening the valve by lifting the head off the seating. When the cam shaft has turned sufficiently, the valve spring pulls the valve back on its seat, thus closing it, and the whole mechanism returns to its original position. Sometimes the rocker and/or tappot is omitted, especially with overhead camshaft engines. In sleeve valve engines (a.v.) the valve is both opened and closed positively, without the aid of springs.

valve chamber in side valve engines, that chamber in which the valves are situated.

valve lift the distance the valves are lifted from their seatings by the cams. volplane (vol'-pian) n. gliding descent of an aeroplane.

volplane (vol'-plan) n. gliding descent of an aeroplane. (3) water jacket the chamber surrounding the cylinders which holds the cooling water.

white metal any soft metal used for lining plain bearings.

wire wheel a wheel with spokes in tension.

Wing n. an aerofoil; mudguard of a car.

WORM gear a type of gear in which an ordinary pinion meshes with a special kind of gear wheel having teeth in the form of a spiral round its circumference.

ENCYCLOPEDIA OF PROPER NAMES AND GENERAL KNOWLEDGE

In this supplement are grouped together in one alphabetical list the Proper Names which have persisted in Literature. Mythology, History and Tradition, and to which continual reference is made in the Press and General Literature of the day. The variety and wide range of the sources consulted by the compilers establish it as a store of General Knowledge.

Abbaye

Andromache

Abbaye (à-bā') L', a former French military prison, Paris; one scene of the September passacres, 1792.
Abbotsford (ab'-ust-förd) residence of Sir Walter Scott. 3 m. above

Abou Ben Adhem (á'-bóó ben á'-dem)

Abraham (â'-bra-ham) Plains of, an elevated plain just beyond Quebeo, Canada: scene of the Battle of Quebec.

Absalom (ab'-sa-lum) a character in Dryden's political satire, Absalom and Achitophel, a defence of Charles II. against the Whig party. Absalom represented the Duke of Monmouth, Charles II.'s natural son; Achitophel represented the Earl of Shaftesbury (1621-1683).

Abydos (a-bi'-dos) town on the Hellespont, Leander.

Academy (ak-ad'-em-i), the school of Plato; Academy in the garden of Academus, in Athens. The French Academy, the first of five societies of arts and science; founded in Paris by Richelieu. The Royal Academy, the chief English Art Association.

Acharnians (a-kar'-ni-anz) The, a comedy by Aristophanes; written to support the aristocratic party against the democratic war party.

Acheron (ak'-t-ron) a river in the Hades of the Greeks.

Achilles (a-kil'-ēz) king of the Myrmidons in Thessaly; the hero of Homer's Achitophel (a-kit'-u-fel). See Absalom.

Acis (a sis) myth. son of Faunus, lover of Galatea; his rival, Polyphemus, crushed him under a huge rook. Acis and Galatea, an opera Actæon (ak-të'-un) myth, huntsman; having surprised Diana bathing, was turned into a stag, and killed by his own hounds.

Addled Parliament James I.'s second Parliament (1614), dissolved in thirty days without having passed any Acts.

Adonai a-dō'-ni) a Hebrew name of Jehovah, translated "Lord."

Adullam (a-dul'-am) Cave of: a cave used by David as a hiding-place for himself, and an asylum for "every one that was discontented"; hence Adulamites, the party which seconded from the Liberals in 1869.

Ægeus (ā'-jūs) myth. king of Athens, who at Attica threw himself into the sea from grief at the supposed death of his son; hence, traditionally, the sea was called Ægean.

Ægir (å'-jir) God of the Ocean (Norse myth.).

Agis (ë'jis) shield of Jupiter, symbolised "divine protection."

Alfric (al'-frik) in 10th and 11th centuries, English abbot and writer of Homilies.

And the Greeks reduced to Italy, after the Greeks reduced Troy, forms the subject of Virgil's epic, the Eneid.

And (e'-ne'-id) the epic poem of the Roman poet Virgil.

Æsir (&'-sir) the gods of Norse myth., 12 in number, exclusive of Odin; their home was Asgard.

Actian (ā-ē'-shan) [Actius, of Antioch], one of the extreme Arians of the latter part of the fourth century.

Africander Bont (af - re - kan' - der boont) or Bond, a S. African association whose ideal was an independent S. Africa.

Agamemon (ag-a-mem'-non) king of the Greek leaders at Troy. His murder by his wife in his bath forms the subject of Æschylus's tragedy Agamemnon.

Agamemnon.

Ahasuerus (a-haz-ū-ĉ'-rus): (1) Xerxes, the Ahasuerus of the book of Esther. (2) The Wandering Jew of romance.

Ajax (â'-jaks) one of the Greek heroes in Homer's Iliad. He was second only to Achilles in bravery, but in the contest for Achilles' armour he was defeated by Ulysses, and this caused his death.

Alabama (al-à-bà'-ma) a vessel built for the Confederate States at Birkenhead. For the offences against neutrality of this and other vessels Britain paid a heavy indemnity.

Aladdin (a-lad'-in) the hero of Aluddin and the Wonderful Lamp in the Arabian Nights.

Albion (al'-bi-on) the ancient name of Britain; Alchemist, The a comedy by Ben Alchemist, The double of Britain; Aldine Press (al'-din) the press set up at Venice by Aldus Manutius, 16th cent.

Alhambra (al-ham'-bra) a great Moorish citadel and palace in Granada, Spain.

Almack's (al'-maks) assembly rooms; the resort of fashion in later eighteenth cent., and onwards, later as Willis's.

Alsatia (al-sā'-shya) a form of Alsace, formerly a very disturbed district; Whitefriars, in London, once a sanctuary for debtors and criminals.

Altair (al-tār') [A.] the brightest star in Amadis of Carl (am'-a-cig av could) Amadis of Gaul (am'-a-dis av gawl') romance; celebrated in the Breton Cycle of carly French epic.

Amaryllis, Amarillis (am-a-ril'-is) a pastoral sweetheart, in the pastorals of Theocritus and Virgil.

Amazon (am'-a-zon) a warlike, masculine woman. According to a Greek story, a race of such women lived in Asia Minor. Ammon's Son (am'-un) Alexander the Great, who was saluted by the priests of the temple of Jupiter Ammon, as the son of the god.

Amphion (am-fi'-on) a myth. musician who received a lyre from Mercury, and played so skilfully that wood and stone rose and followed him. The walls of Thebes were fabled to have been so built.

Andromache (an-drom'-a-kē) a noble and lovely woman, wife of Hector Andromeda (an-drom'-e-da) myth, daughter of Cassiopeia; by command of Ammon was clustued to a rock to be destroyed by a sea monster, but was rescued by Perseus, who slew the monster.

Anna Karenina (ân'-na kâ-ra'-ne-na) a novel by Tolstol.

DICTIONARY OF ALTERNATIVES

This supplement contains a comprehensive list of the alternative forms and spellings with the same or similar meanings in use in the English language. To assist search the words are grouped according to the number of letters and, within the groups, alphabetically. The most usual form of the word is given first and (with the exception of a few indicated dialect and slang words) each will be found fully defined in the dictionary proper. Most of the alternatives will also be found there, but occasionally spellings are given which, although they have no place in the general vocabulary of the day, may yet be found necessary in word competitions.

Alternatives which are themselves familiar and may therefore form a basis for the search, are given full duplicate entry. Where none of the words in the group is generally known a short meaning is given as a help with the "clue" and a guide to the full meaning in the dictionary. Words prefixed alternatively with "un-" or "in-" will be found grouped under letter "I."

Careful attention should be paid to the wording of a "clue"; comparison with the dictionary definition will often eliminate a number of the possible alternatives, and a "clue may call for a noun or a verb, etc., or a special tense or person of a verb or pronoun (which are not listed separately), or a noum in the plural (in which case the singular should be sought in the lists). The whole list of words of a given length should be scanned before the number of possible alternatives is considered complete, thus Babble, Gabble, Rabble, which are possible alternatives, will be found in different groups of the list.

Dictionary of Synonyms

A glossary of essential Synonyms, or words which have a meaning the same as, or similar to, that of a given word, and Antonyms, or words which have an opposite or contrasting meaning. The Antonyms are enclosed in square brackets. In the craft of writing, an appreciation of the nicer shades of expression is of the first importance, and a proper study of synonyms will crystallise the author's meaning and give colour and vivacity to his work. The value of a list of synonyms for finding the happy turn of phrase required in many competitions will be readily understood.

Customary Abbreviations

USED IN MODERN WRITING AND PRINTING

A comprehensive glossary of the abbreviations and contractions used in the Press, Commercial activities and affairs of the day, with explanations and indications of their correct use. In applying these lists to the solution of word puzzles, special attention should be paid to the exact wording of the "clue," since this may clearly limit the number of possible alternatives.
